HISTORY

In 1923, Arthur C. Nielsen Sr. founded Nielsen by inventing the retail measurement business. He serviced clients with bimonthly audits and market projections. Among many innovations in consumer-focused marketing and media research, Mr. Nielsen was responsible for creating a unique retail-measurement technique that gave clients the first reliable, objective information about competitive performance and the impact of marketing and sales programs on revenues and profits. Nielsen information provided practical meaning to the concept of “market share,” and made it one of the critical measures of corporate performance.

Mr. Nielsen used his knowledge of market measurement to launch a media measurement business — first in radio, and then television. Nielsen later consolidated the media business into multi-media measurement and became the global leader in providing these services.

Nielsen opened its first international office in the United Kingdom in 1939 and, after World War II, progressively expanded its operations in Western Europe, Australia, and Japan. The company increased its presence in Asia Pacific in 1994 by acquiring Survey Research Group, and in the Middle East and Africa in the late 1990s through the acquisition of AMER World Research.

In 1999, VNU acquired Nielsen Media Research and subsequently acquired ACNielsen

In early 2006, Valcon Acquisition B.V., a company controlled by a private equity group, purchased VNU for approximately $9 billion.

David Calhoun was elected chairman of the executive board and chief executive officer in August 2006. Before joining Nielsen, Calhoun was vice chairman of General Electric Company and president and CEO, GE Infrastructure. Throughout his 27 years at GE, he also served as president and CEO of GE Transportation, GE Aircraft Engines, Employers Reinsurance Corporation, GE Lighting, and GE Transportation Systems.

In January 2007, Calhoun rebranded VNU as The Nielsen Company, transforming a collection of independent businesses into a single, integrated operating company that offers clients a clear understanding of markets and consumers and helps shed light on growth opportunities for them.
